Mölltaler Gletscher – 8th October 2021 – Great news from Austria! The Mölltaler Gletscher ski resort will welcome the first skiers already next week. Experience great autumn skiing adventures on the only glacier in Carinthia from Thursday 14th October!

The first preparations for the new season began on the glacier already in September. The favourable change of weather in recent days which has brought a temperature drop and also long awaited snowfall has sped up everything. “Our snow-making system has been running full speed from Wednesday. We want to create perfect conditions and prepare our ski pistes as good as possible. Hopefully, the weather will stay on our side and adds natural snow as well,” said Stefan Klotz, the resort general manager. The piste opening on the glacier is scheduled for Thursday 14th October 2021. In addition, the official season opening with an attractive programme is planned for 28th October.

The Mölltaler Gletscher Alpine resort is located in the High Tauern Mountains and the highest spot is 3,122m above sea level. Top conditions make Mölltal a popular training resort among national ski teams from all over Europe. And the fact that it offers skiing when the season in Slovakia, the Czech Republic, Poland or Austria is long over or has not begun yet is a very important benefit.
